Items might have shifted, but they're still there

We had to shift some features that you're used to seeing in the Journals this week because of a half page ad we are putting on the front page of . The weekend outlook and what's inside will be located on page 2A each

We also have a few other changes this week as we continue to perfect the two-section format we've gone to.

Sports stories will be folded into the community section as will the different elements of the opinion page.

But don't worry. We'll still have letters to the editor, a cartoon, and John S. Mati-jevich's column. They just won't all be located on the same page every-

Joe Grace

And we'll still cover prep sports. In fact, we're looking for some ideas with the start of a new season.

If you know of a prep sports athlete who you would like to see profiled, please e-mail Kathy Gresey. at kgresey@nwenwsgroup.com.

This week, we say goodbye to Round Lake and Wauconda reporter Carly Romano, who is moving down to Florida. She did a great job in the time she was with us. Thanks, Carly!

With school under way, we'd like to hear about any school news you might have.

Know of a student who has done something exceptional?

Let us know, It could be building a volcano for a science project, writing an awardwinning essay, or simply starting a cool, new club at the school. We'll be happy to write about whatever it is.

It's important that we recognize and celebrate the students in our community. They are - as we all well know and have been told countless times - our future.

And I predict that we have more than a few exceptional students in Lake County who would be worth writing about.

Restaurants earn recognition

Sammie's chain honored for hot dogs, community service

By KIMI LILLIG

grayslake@weeklyjournals.com

GRAYSLAKE - A poppy seed bun, yellow mustard, chopped onion, green relish, tomato wedges, pickle spear, celery salt, sport peppers and Vienna beef is not just the recipe for an authentic Chicago-style hot dog.

It also is a recipe for success at Sammie's restaurant, which was inducted into the Vienna Beef Hot Dog Hall of Fame on Aug. 19. The eatery has locations in Grayslake, Round Lake and

To become a Hot Dog Hall of Fame member, a hot-dog venue has to be in operation for at least 20 years; it has to be a long time purchaser of Vienna Beef products; and its has to have made a contribution to the community. "We [started inducting hot-dog places] as a way to reward the people who brought us to the dance," said Bob Schwartz, senior vice president at Vienna Beef.

Sammie's and Vienna have been grooving for a long time.

Sammy Guinta, owner of Sammie's. and his brother opened the first of their hot-dog stands on Irving Park Road in Chicago about 44 years ago to keep themselves out of trouble in the summer of 1964, they said.

A plaque is given to employees at Sammie's hot-dog stand in Grayslake during the restaurant's induction into the Vienna Beef Hot Dog Hall of Fame.

In 1972, they moved to Grayslake. And in 1981, the Round Lake restaurant opened. The newest addition to the Sammie's franchise opened in Lake Villa in 1997. These venues opened with the help of David Keith, Tom Sheehan and Guinta's son Dominic.

"This is my working career accomplishment," said Guinta. "I am very proud to be acknowledged for all these years of working and to be included in such a short list.

Schwartz and Craig Cambell, also of Vienna Beef, presented a plaque, banners, T-shirts and pins during the Hall of Fame induction ceremony, which took place at the Sammie's location in Grayslake.

Want to go?

Sammie's restaurants are located at 799 E. Belvidere Road, Grayslake: 215 W. Rollins Road, Round Lake; and 216 N. Milwaukee Ave., Lake Villa.

The story of Sammie's is one not found in too many cities, Schwartz "Places like Sammie's are so valuable to the Chicagoland area, and it is so gratifying to see these places with 20 years or more of successful business,'

Schwartz has heard many hot-dog hut success stories in his years at Vienna - so many stories, that he has written a book called "Never Put Ketchup on a Hot Dog," which features hot-dog stands – including Sammie's – in the Chicago area.

The book will be on sale at all Sammie's locations.

'Communities can spring up around hot dog stands," Schwartz said. "They become the center of gravity and growth."

This growth occurs, Schwartz said, because people recognize that hot-dog places are part of their culture.

Antioch's final summer concert a rave revue

The Blooze Brothers keep spirits up, crowds singing and dancing despite rain, thunder

By MARK HANSEN antioch@weeklyjournals.com

ANTIOCH - A little thunder and showers could not keep music fans away, as a large crowd continued to dance and cheer to the last note of the last song at the It's Thursday concert series in Antioch.

The seventh and final concert took place at the William E. Brook Entertainment Center (aka the band shell) Aug. 22 with the Blooze Brothers, a soulful tribute band from Chicago, that kicked it into full gear as familie's and friends relaxed on lawn chairs, danced or tapped their feet.

Playing songs from the movie and decked out in black suits, black hats and sunglasses, the band brought a four-piece horn section, drummer, bass guitar, electric guitar and key-

Based on the 1980 movie, "The Blues Brothers," starring John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd, developed from a "Saturday Night Live" sketch that featured songs by soul legends such as James Brown, Cab Calloway, Aretha Franklin, Ray Charles and John Lee Hooker.

The band's motto, "Why hire a band, when you can have an event," rang true. The show covered music from '30s swing, Motown, soul, and rhythm-and-blues.

They even had the Blooze Mobile replica car that Jake and Elwood Blues used.

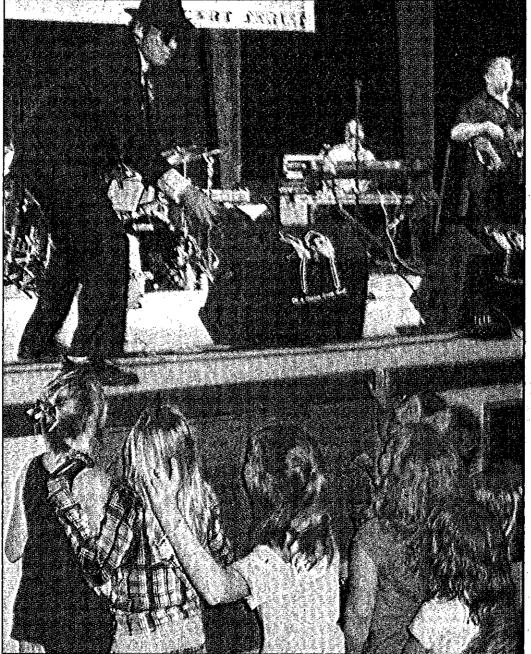

The village of Antioch and major sponsors such as the State Bank of the Lakes and Community Town and Trust, put enough money together to offer this concert free to the public.

"It gives people a chance to be with family and do something as a group opposed to every-one doing their own thing," special events Su-pervisor Shawn Roby said. "My favorite thing about the concerts is that they're free to the public. I get to go out and create an event that doesn't have to come out of their local pocket-

Roby spread the word through news releases, community newsletters, and direct mailing. Roby mentioned highlights from previous Thursday nights, which included the bands Libido Funk Circus of Chicago and Legends, which performed during the classic car show where more than 2,200 people attended. Roby books the bands and has been involved in the music industry for more than 10 years.

Kim Chase, a 1975 graduate of Antioch Community High School, remembered hearing the Blooze Brothers when she was in school.

"I always come up here and listen to these guys when they're playing," she said. "I've seen them out at Blarney's Island, and my sis-

Youngsters crowd around the stage where the tribute band the Blooze Brothers performed at the last sumter used to have the hots for them."

The band did renditions of songs such as "Stand by Your Man" by Tammy Wynette; "Ring of Fire," by Johnny Cash; and "Bend Me Shape Me," by The American Breed.

mer concert of the year in Antioch. The concert was offered free of charge.

Volunteers Michele Keefe and her daughter, Taylor, 17, of Antioch, helped local merchants hand out raffle tickets for drawings to win different prizes.

Anyone who had a receipt from an Antioch merchant could join a raffle.

"All local stores, restaurants, gas stations, any receipt from an Antioch business within the last 10 days," Michele said. "Anybody that they're supporting, they bring their receipts and they draw for different certificates of different merchants in the area. We did this every Thursday over the past few months."

The AARP Chapter 387, which runs operations at Antioch Senior Center served food and raised money for the troops in Iraq. The money goes toward paying the $9 postage to send care packages to troops. So far, the group has donated about $4,500 to send 500 care packages using items such as toiletries and socks collected by Antioch VFW Post 4551.

"It's a lot of fun, all fun," President Jack Schuman said. "We prepare all our food here. We got hot dogs, brats, hamburgers, French fries, nachos, bakery goods, and coffee. We got almost anything."

At 8:30 p.m. the lead singer announced that thunder and showers were on the way and that the band would continue playing.

Despite a prolonged period of rain, people stuck it out and enjoyed themselves.

Brian Kelley, of Antioch, was dressed head to toe in a tight-fitting Elvis costume he bought at JJ Blinkers, strutting his stuff for the show.

After the show, tenor saxophonist Andy Blanco of Cary, an eight-year veteran of the band, said: "We have a good time. I'm a big time fan of the Blue Brothers movies - absolutely no question. It's a lot of fun playing with these guys; I can recite every line from that movie.' Blanco enjoyed the crowd.

"What a crowd, unbelievable," he said. "It's humid, it's pouring down rain, and they're out there screaming their heads off. Who could ask for anything more than that?"

John Kattke, lead guitarist, had the good fortune of working with Chicago blues artists, such as Buddy Guy, Coco Taylor, Otis Rush and Matt Murphy.

"It's always great playing here," Kattke said. 'The crowds always responsive, and there's a lot of energy going back and forth between us and them, so it's always a good time."

Jeff Sismelich of Orland Park, who resembled John Belushi's character, "Joliet" Jake Blues, sang and danced wildly, capturing the spirit of the blues. He joined the band back in March, and was apart of a Blue Brothers tribute in the '80s.

He loved the Antioch crowd as well.

"They were incredible, very receptive, and energetic," he said "I admire anyone who will sit through some rain and showers and be as involved as they were; it's just a great crowd." Jack Shuman of the AARP worded the experience nicely. "It's about the excitement, the excitement," he said.

"And the people, I just love all the people."

Lake Villa to host final summer treat

By TIM FROEHLIG lakevilla@weeklyjournals.com

LAKE VILLA - As summer draws to an end, the village of Lake Villa is giving area residents one more chance to enjoy some evening fun outdoors.

Lehmann Park will host a variety of events from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 30. Scheduled is a night of food, raffles, live music and more.

The best part? It's free. The park is located at 162 Cedar Ave. in Lake Villa, across from the Metra train station.

There will be two local food vendors at the event: Scott Dogs and Grande Jakes.

In addition to the food, the band "So What Now" will perform. The group includes four members who perform a type of music they call "frunk," a mix of rock and funk, according to the band's Web page.

The band members go by the names Rob Rath, Jerry Matthews, Maurice Houston and J dot B. Video of the band's music can be viewed at lf you go ...

The band "So What Now" will perform Saturday, Aug. 30, at Lehmann Park. Events run from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. The concert is free and open to the public.

www.myspace.com/sowhatnowmusic.

There also will be prizes raffled off during the event, such as a 32-inch flat-screen TV that was donated by Nielsen Development. For those not interested in a TV, there also will be a ratifle for a 2008 Polaris ATV from Lake Villa business Nielsen Enterprises.

For adults, there will be a beer-tap refrigerator offered as a raffle prize, something that was popular at last year's event, officials said. This item will be provided by the local business Fire By Design.

The event is open to all Lake County residents, and the evening will conclude with a fireworks display that will start about 8:20 p.m.

LAKE COUNTY JOURNALS

ANTIOCH - Nicole Hojnacki and Yvonne Miklautsch, both 2008 graduates of Antioch High School, have been honored for academic achievements in psychology by the Teachers of Psychology in Secondary Schools.

TOPSS, sponsored by the American Psychological Association, was established to address the needs and concerns of high school teachers and students of psychology.

School social studies teachers John Walker and Nancy Fenton nominated the two students because of their outstanding grades in psychology, their high scores on the Advanced Placement Psychology Exam, and their involvement in the school's psychology club.

Hojnacki and Miklautsch each received a textbook in psychology. Miklautsch is a pre-med major at Loyola University, and Hojnacki plans to study psychology at Augustana College.

Antioch tackles Grayslake Central in season opener

By MATT DOUTHETT mdcuthett@nwnewsgroup.com

GRAYŚLAKE - The Grayslake Central Rams team is ready to prove its winless 2007 season was a fluke.

The Rams will host Antioch on Aug. 29. Rams head coach Nick Goshe knows his team will have a lot to prepare for to stop Sequoits running back Cameron White.

"He's a talented young man," Goshe said. "Last year, he hurt us a couple of times and kept getting better and better throughout the year. He's a big time player, and he's going to be the focus of our defense because he's there home run threat. If we can figure out a way to stop Cameron, you have a better chance to stop Antioch."

Antioch head coach Brian Glashagel said that White isn't the only offensive threat in his

We have a really good backfield," he said.

"We're returning Steve Lorenzini, and he's really the hammer in the backfield. Cameron gives us the outside element in our offense. If you get him in open space, he's very hard to bring down. He's one of the best backs I've ever coached."

Both teams are anxious to get the season under way. Goshe said his Rams are highly anticipating the season opener.

"Anytime high school football gets kicked off, the community gets into it," Goshe said. 'We have a great community in Grayslake. The fans are said. going to come out and support us, and anytime you kick off throughout the course of the the season, it's exciting."

The Rams are looking to be aggressive on offense right off

"We want to force Antioch into playing a different game than they would like," Goshe

They want to grind it out game. We want to score quick and score in bunches."

Goshe said his players have done their hard work and are prepared for the regular-season grind.

"They're invested now. They put time in the weight room and in summer camps,"

"That's stuff that hasn't been done here in a while. They're excited to show off some of the things they've over the last couple of months during the offseason."

Glashagel said Grayslake Central will be focused on stopping the Sequoits' run-

'They're going to spread us out and throw the ball more than a lot of teams do," he said. "On defense, they'll put eight men in the box and use some 4-4 or 5-3 defense against us. But, you could show up next Friday and that's all out the window. That's the thing about a first game - there's a lot of things that could have changed over the last couple

Drivers seeing red

Smile, you're on candid camera. We all laughed for years when the popular TV program caught unsuspecting 'suckers" televised by hidden cameras. When the person fell for the magic sentence, it brought a spontaneous roar of laughter from viewers.

Now, there's a different candid camera catching unsuspecting motorists at intersections across the country. It's the red-light cameras trying to catch drivers running red lights or making turns at intersections and telling them that they made the turns too late. When Chicago started the red-light cameras five years ago, I knew that the suburbs would follow suit. There's so much money involved, it was too good to pass up. In 2006, Chicago rang the register over injustices in the red light $20 million dollars.

Recently, I read that Gumee has given the "green light" to install cameras at six intersections. Libertyville is expected to do the same in the coming months. Suburbs always told me that they didn't like to follow Chicago's lead on anything. But, at the copy-cat rate that they're going, every major intersection anywhere will have "lookout cameras."

If you listen to mayors, city administrators, or law enforcement officials, it's all about traffic safety. Pardon ine, I think it's not as much about reducing accidents as it is about increasing revenues.

By state law, the communities can impose up to $100 in fines for each camera violation. Most will opt for that, although some are assessing $75. It's a slam dunk for cities.

Out of the $100 fine, most of the administrative work is done by the camera installing company. They print the violation notices, and mall them to "violators," and view the photos. The only work that the cities do is have police review the photos and give final approval to the violation notices. For that, the cities rack up about $65 of the fine and the camera company about $35. What a deal.

Then there is the big kick in the mouth to motorists.

If you accumulate five or more unpaid tickets, a notice sent to the Secretary State. You can face suspension of your driving privileges. Believe me, there have been, and there will be more, drivers who have never had a moving violation or accident in their lives who are receiving "camera-ready" citations.

It just ain't right. The çamera system is not without controversy. Seven states have passed bans against cameras that target speeders and others are re-considering the use of the red-light cameras.

🐉 The public outcry has been enormous. As much as I believe in traffic safety, count me as a critic. I know when ordinary citizens are being taken advantage of, and this Is one of those cases.

First, when you get a traffic ticket from a live person, you are informed of what you did wrong and you are informed of your legal options. In the camera "arrests," you might be notified days or weeks afterward, and you might be rightly puzzled if you were at any fault at all.

The camera takes a photo of the car but cannot identify the driver. It has always been the law that, except for parking violations, there is no presumption of law that an owner is the driver. What if your spouse, relative, or friend uses your car. They try to force people to inform who was driving, even if the owner isn't sure.

🏌 Even if you were driving, I thought that you have a constitutional right to face your accuser in court.

In effect, the camera is your accuser, "and he's not talking." Well, if the camera isn't talking, I think that you have a right to remain silent,

This early in the game, moforists are really complaining when they get camera tickets, alleging that they turned red at an intersection just as the red light went on. I recall that for many years the correct answer on the road test was that, if you are in an intersection, you have the legal right to complete a turn as long as it can be done safely. Cameras not only don't follow the law, they have no heart, either. One of the back lashes of the red-light cameras is that there are more rear end collisions. That will be the normal result of driver uncertainties over fear of the cameras.

I know that I am whistling In the wind. There are other photo operation and one long column can't give those issues any justice.

And those who can right the ship are busy counting the revenue, and they won't begin to steer it right. There is too much money involved, so motorists will get madder and their pockets will get lighter.

School funding issues To the Editor:

As the school year draws. near, we are reminded again of the inequity of school funding in Illinois. For several decades, The League of Women Voters has advocated for substantive change in the way we fund education in Illinois. The League believes our current tax structure is seriously flawed and incapable of generating revenues sufficient even to keep pace with inflation.

The ensuing structural deficit requires a massive infusion of new moneys every year just to maintain current funding levels let alone having to meet increased demands. The Illinois

Constitution mandates majority funding for public education; that is becoming less and less an achievable reality.

We believe the time for developing a more reliable and equitable funding base in Illinois is long overdue. It is important for each of usto let our representatives in Springfield know we are tired of the meager response when a radical approach is needed. It is past time for the legislators to find the courage to become part of the solution rather than remaining part of the problem.

Kim Mangia

Working out can be tough

After I gave birth to my oldest son, my pediatrician gave me a very good piece of

She told me that having a baby meant I would probably need to "downsize my expectations,"

Meaning I wasn't going to have time for everything I used to, and well, get used to it!

It is funny how that phrase has stuck with me through the years.

Antonio is almost 9 and sometimes when I can't be everywhere or do everything at once I find myself saying, "I guess I'll have to downsize my expectations."

What brings this phrase to mind is my latest endeavor, getting in shape.

Yes, regular exercise intended to restore my body to some semblance of what it looked like before giving birth

How's that for big expectations? ! Now, I know there are some people who truly enjoy every moment of their daily work-

But look, there are also people in this country who don't like chocolate.

Let's just say I am not either one of those people.

But I do love the feeling of being able to breath in my jeans again.

It is just the process of getting there.

Enough gym memberships have come and gone for me to know group exercise is not a good fit.

So, I choose to go it alone, via workout videos with fit, cheery instructors so fit and cheery that eventually I need to watch the video without sound.

As much as I would love to say my workouts are a great stress reliever and a special time I take for myself and blah, blah, blah ... Well, it's not really like that.

My boys enjoy lying on the bed, watching me exercise. And helping out with supportive comments such as, "Mom, why doesn't your leg go up as high as hers?"

My dogs enjoy standing over me, panting warm, stinky dog breath in my face. My daughter?

Well it is amazing how long a 30-minute video actually takes when you figure in the pause time necessary to open a string cheese, help with wiping duties in the bathroom and refill juice.

Twice. But I've been trying to keep it up, even if I can only fit in 15 or 20 minutes a day.

When I get crazy because I can't do more, I just remeniber sometimes when you're a mom, it's OK to downsize your expectations.

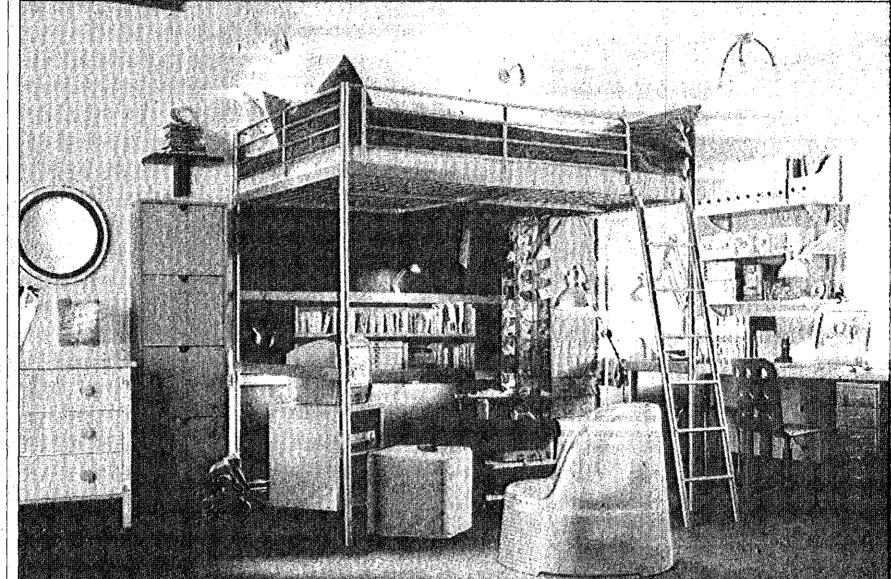

In fact, it's actually doctor's orders.

Trust me on this.

Small dorm suites for students offer big potential

College students everywhere are taking a crash course in an annual ritual: Surviving Small Spac-

.These days it's easier than ever to transform a sterile, institutional dorm room into something warm, fun and functional.

Thank the numerous design shows on TV, coupled with store displays this time of year that serve as guides and inspiration for the college bound. "There are a lot of stores that [market] directly toward college dorm decorating," said Becky Yaworski, 18, of Crystal Lake. A freshman at Bethel College in Mishawaka, Ind., she plans to decorate her room with posters from music festivals she attended this summer. "It's already set up for you.

There's a lot of trendy stuff." At the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, average dorm rooms are either 10 feet long and 10 feet wide or 12 feet long and 12 feet wide, according to school officials. The newest residence hall was built in the 1960s, a time when students arrived at college with fewer belongings.

"Our students are bringing coordinated suites of items," said Kirsten Ruby, assistant director of housing for marketing at the university. "People are showing up with brand new items for their rooms. It's not just random castoffs."

The key to decorating minimal square footage? Going vertical.

Stackable boxes, wall shelves and loft beds that allow for a desk and study space underneath are recommended by design experts and retailers.

"You want to embrace a multifunctional mantra," said IKEA spokesman Chris Garcia. "Double

Tips for a fabulous dorm room

Start looking up. Utilize vertical space through shelving, loft beds or bed risers.

Be multifunctional. Place pieces in the room that can serve more than one purpose, such as a stool that doubles

Avoid clutter. Making sure everything has a place will not only save space, but also create a healthier environment for studying and living.

Try some color. Add touches of color through throw > pillows, rugs and bedding. Make a drab couch fab with a colorful slipcover.

duty's good. Triple duty's better. Make sure your products are space-saving. If you have a bed, see if it has a built-in drawer feature or [look for] an end *table that transforms into a stool."

Among the many multifunctional items IKEA offers are benches and stools that offer storage, as well as hangers that can organize accessories and serve as decoration.

Garcia also suggests checking out the store's bed risers, which lift beds to create more storage

"Your dorm room is typically your living room, home office, bedroom and mini-kitchen all in one," Garciá said. "If you're going to have a multifunctional room, make sure it fits all [those functions]."

Rolling filing cabinets that can hold course syllabi and other important papers are perfect for dorm rooms, said interior designer Ivette Lem-

"It's nice because you can tuck it somewhere and when you need it, roll it out," said Lemons owner of Cadtek Design in Grayslake. "You can have a nice filing area."

Most universities might frown on painting dorm room walls, but a splash of color can make a big difference in a small space.

Try adding color through throw pillows and bedding, Lemons said, For homesick students, a hip tackboard displaying pictures of friends and family can add some familiarity to the decor.

'Make sure you have a piece of you," Lemons said. "Set up your dorm room to reflect your per?

Gadgets such as MP3 players and laptops have simplified the process of putting together a clean organized dorm room, Lemons said. Where to place your roommate's bulky stereo system isn't really an issue anymore. "Everything is just so streamlined," she said.

"You carry your stereo in your pocket. Even if you have a desktop computer, you have flat panels which take up a lot less space." Although in recent years, back to college shop ping has become big business, current economic conditions are expected to make students spend less on dorm decor this fall. According to the National Retail Federation the ayerage college student will spend about $90,90 spent last year. But a tough economy isn't likely to stop college students from being creative. Each spring, the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign judges on dorm furnishings, verses the $109.85 he or she dorm room decor through a Fab Pad contest. "Some of them are just hilarious," Ruby said of the entries.

Chrills abound in 'Traitor'

By JEFFREY WESTHOFF jeffreywesthoff@jeffwest,com

Thoughtfulness is not something you expect in a post-9/11 spy movie, but that quality distinguishes "Traitor" from similar thrillers made in the past few years.

Don Cheadle plays Samir Horn, an explosives expert who claims he sell his products to anyone who pays his price, but because he is based in North Africa and the Middle East most of his clients are Muslim terrorists. Guy Pearce plays FBI agent Roy Clayton, who tracks Horn around the globe.

Yes, "Traitor" is another thriller about Muslim terrorists and suicide bombers, but there are no fanatics on either side.

Rather than the jingoistic crew of FBI agents sent to Saudi Arabia in "The Kingdom," Clayton is exactly the type of operative you hope the FBI actually employs to track down terrorists.

He is analytical, selfless, speaks Arabic and understands Muslim culture. He chides his bartner (Neal McDonough) for litting a suspect while interroating him. "You get a suspect talk by pushing his buttons,' Clayton says, "not getting him to push yours.'

Meanwhile, as Horn is ecruited into a terrorist cell by a new friend, Omar (Said Taghmaoui), he has doubts about their methods. A faithful Muslim, Horn balks at the idea of killing civilians.

If this sounds like a strange position for a man who sells explosives, that's decause Horn has a secret. You may already know the secret from the movie's advertising, but for those who don't I won't reveal it. "Traitor" is better with its surprises intact.

Writer-director Jeffrey Nachmanoff based the script on a story idea supplied by

'Traitor'

水水水 Rated: PG-13 for intense violent sequences, thematic materials and brief language

Running time: 1 hour, 50 minutes Writer and director: Jeffrey Nachmanoff

Steve Martin.

Yes, that Steve Martin. While the setup itself is hardly original, Martin probably supplied the story's intelligent tone and attention to character.

Like "The Fugitive," "Traitor" is a thriller where both the pursuer and the pursued are well-developed, compelling and sympathetic figures. And as they must in stories like this, they share defining similarities. Both are sons of holy men. Clayton's father was a Baptist minister, and Horn's father was an imam killed by a car bomb in Sudan in 1978 (this scene is the prologue).

The characters spend an unusual amount of time talking about faith and conscience, but "Traitor" also delivers old-fashioned spy stuff like shaking tails and meeting contacts in rain soaked alleys. And in an era where high production costs limit film crews to one or two major locations, "Traitor" jaunts to many international locales: Morocco, Marseilles, London, Toronto and Chicago.

The only other recent thriller that shot in as many places was "Munich," and that was a Spielberg movie. For a moviemaker with a thin resume - "Traitor" is only his second feature as writer and director and only his first as both - Nachmanoff puts together an impressivelooking film, thanks to cinematographer J. Michael Muro ("Open Range").

The one weakness is flat and clichéd dialogue that reveals Nachmanoff's previous script was the hokey disaster movie "The Day After Tomor-

ining Out? Test Your Restaurant Etiquette

(MS) — The country is seeing an upward swing in casual attitudes. Suits and ties no longer dominate the boardroom, and some feel that formality in general is becoming lax.

According to statistics from the last 20 years, the amount of disposable income spent on eating out has increased, giving reason to believe there are more people dining out than ever before. There are also those who believe that restaurant etiquette could use some reform, and the "customer is always right" line of thinking is not applicable at all times. Brushing up on social graces at a restaurant is beneficial for those in corporate America, but can also be important simply for social or family occasions. Find out if your restaurant behavior earns you four stars by taking the quiz below. Correct answers follow.

- 1. When making a reservation, what piece of information do people often forget that can earn them better service?
 - a, a comment about the excellence of the restaurant
 - b their name
 - c. their phone number
- d. their seating preference
- 2. In lieu of demanding the best table in the restaurant, what is a better tactic
- to take to get the ideal location?

Make a grand entry with Doors & More

By LESLIE GLAZIER-WERNER

First impressions count, and Doors & More can make sure your home is at its best, beginning at the front door.

Owner Keith Surroz said he uses his 20 years of homebuilding experience to provide the perfect solution for customers looking for not only doors, but also windows, and sunrooms. "We help people solve problems with the widest range of options possible," Surroz noted. "We give them the look they want and stand behind out work."

Doors & More offers a variety of products for enhancing your front entryway, which, according to a survey of new homebuyers, can add as much as $24,000 to a home's perceived value. Decorative glass transoms and sidelights, coupled with premium brand steel, fiberglass, and wood doors can change a ho-hum entry into an elegant statement.

Doors & More can also transform your existing front door with a beautiful piece of leaded glass, letting in natural light without sacrificing privacy or strength. Keith noted that Doors & More is offering free glass installation through the end of October.

The company also carries a wide range of interior doors, patio doors, as well as storm and screen doors. And Doors & More can measure, install, custom-size, stain and paint almost any order.

But don't stop there. Doors & More takes the same care installing energy efficient windows that can add drama and value to your home.

Or add living space with a light-filled sunroom. Imagine the possibilities. A sunroom from Doors & More is constructed of durable materials, but at a cost far less than other types of additions.

And then there are the finishing touches that mean so much. Doors & More carries the trim and millwork to turn the ordinary into attention-getting architecture. For example, the company installs porches, columns, railings, doorway arches, gable décor, crown moldings, and much more.

So let Doors & More help you turn your home into a showplace. Visit their showroom or go to their web site at www.shopdoorsandmore.com for a quote within one day. "Or if you're not sure, just give us a call," Keith said, "We're always looking at new products."

Heat pump or furnace: How to choose

(NAPSA)-Whichever season you choose to replace your home's heating system in the deciding factor on which system to use may be the weather.

If you live in an area where the temperature rarely dips below 40 degrees, you can probably heat your home more affordably with a heat pump than a furnace. That's because furnaces tend to be more expensive to operate, depending on the cost of the electricity in your area or the natural gas and bil that are used to operate them:

However, if the temperature outside your home is typically colder than 40 degrees, consider having a furnace justalled. Furnaces can more easily maintain warm temperatures, when the difference between the temperature outside and inside increases.

Another important factor to consider is efficiency. The efficiency of a gas furnace is indicated by the unit's Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency (AFUE) rating, while the Heating Season Performance Factor (HSPF) measures a heat pump's efficiency.

The higher the AFUE or HSPF, the more efficient the unit and the less fuel it requires to heat your home. Although electric furnaces are often considered 100 percent efficient, remember that the system's initial cost should be weighed against the annual operating expense.

A third factor to consider when selecting a heat pump or furnace is the manufacturer. Select a brand of equipment that has a reputation for quality, energy efficiency and relfability. For example, the York brand of heating and cooling equipment from Johnson Controls has been around for more than 130 years.

The new Affinity series of furnaces and heat pumps offers the latest features in heating technology and control systems. The Affinity furnaces feature variable speeds to improve efficiency, maintain constant temperatures and reduce sound levels.

The electronic controls on the Affinity furnaces and heat pumps may offer tighter temperature control and the ability to program periods of temperature setback, improving both system efficiency and occupant comfort,
